Digital Archive

Since June 1944, thousands of AAs have turned to the Grapevine to tell their stories, voice their opinions, and report on matters of importance to the Fellowship. Now it's all right here in the Digital Archive, along with sixty years of AA humor. Have a look.

Accessing the Digital Archive Starting July 1, 2004, subscribers to the Digital Archive will log in to access the archive. As registered subscribers, they will be able to get stories from the entire archive. During the month of June, however, the archive will be open to all, free. After June, non-subscribers to the archive will still be able to read or download Story of the Day and a joke in the Grab Bag, but they will no longer have access to the full archive.

Searching the Digital Archive

Here are the main ways to search:

By Magazine Department

There's a complete list of magazine departments, past and present. Browse until you find what you're interested in.

By Theme

The contents of the archive have been organized into broad themes — you may find just the topic you're looking for.

By Date

Look through articles a year at a time or go right to the issue.

By Keyword

You'll be able to customize your search by keying in a word or phrase that describes the specific topic or kind of article you're looking for.
